

Crackdown underway for homeroom attendance

By Vanessa Langdon

Many students stand in the hallway and talk before that first bell rings for homeroom, and generally that does not make the average student late for homeroom. But now the rules are changing and students had better be ready to comply.

Monday, April 30 the homeroom teachers told the students of a new rule established by G. Ray Bodley High School Principal Mrs. Parkhurst. This new rule changes the old one regarding being late to homeroom. Previously a student could be late to homeroom three times and then their homeroom teacher wrote them a detention slip. This has now been changed to every time a student is late to homeroom, their homeroom teacher is to send them to the attendance office where they will sign in as being late to school, or tardy.

Mrs. Parkhurst spoke with RaiderNet Daily and cleared up some misconceptions that immediately sprang up from the student body.

The policy is not new, according to Mrs. Parkhurst, who said that “[we have] been a little loose following the school procedure.”

Students are supposed to be in homeroom at 7:35, and as Mrs. Parkhurst explained, this policy “is a way to make sure we are getting kids where they need to be, not wandering the hallways.”

As for the change to a more strict interpretation of the school procedure, she explained, “Students were entering homeroom late and [the office] did not have a record of the late students in the computer system.” She clarified that although teachers individually take attendance in each homeroom they are not being marked absent in the main

GRB spring clean-up scheduled for Saturday

If you are looking for a chance to enjoy the outdoors, come aid the Science and Environmental Clubs as they look to beautify the school campus at G. Ray Bodley High School. On Saturday, May 5 the esteemed organizations will be hosting the annual Spring Clean-Up!

Last year this date was set on the same day as the Junior Prom, which hurt many students' chances at helping out their school. There was also a bit of rain interrupting the occasion, so the turnout was lower than usual. But this year is sure to be different with the Saturday morning date of May 5, from 9 am to noon. Everyone should grab a friend and they will be guaranteed to have a fun-filled morning.

A specific duty will be given to groups of students, and friends will not be separated, so you can enjoy yourselves while you help make G.R.B full of life! Also, to those juniors and seniors who are seeking additional community service hours, the Science teachers are more than willing to sign for hours.

Those attending are urged to bring items to help them clean-up. There are not enough tools for everyone, so it would be helpful to scrounge up spring cleaning tools such as shovels, wheelbarrows, watering cans, rakes, hoes, and any kind of hand tools! Gloves are also recommended.

Opinion

Stop treating your school like a slum

By Kara Yakel

While attending school at G. Ray Bodley, students complain about other students, teachers and coaches, but most importantly, they gripe about the school itself.

In reality how is the school supposed to meet every student's needs and expectations? It's all about what you put in as a person and the amount of care you actually have.

No one will take your pity about the bathrooms, because if you take a look in one of the bathrooms here at G. Ray Bodley the question "Do students bring it upon themselves?" will appear in your mind. If you haven't noticed, writing on the toilet paper dispenser, stall doors, walls, or even the mirror, combined with blatant destruction by students has created a situation where it is hard to find sympathy because there are those who clearly do not respect the school.

Maybe you aren't writing "this school is gross," or curse words, it dent Senate and make that change happen. The only way something will change is if you take the initiative to do something about it, meaning don't write on the walls about it, talk to someone with a higher standing to help you.

The custodians probably think you're immature for even thinking that writing something on the wall is going to change anything. If you really do not like something, go to a teacher or principal, not the bathroom stalls.

Not only does the writing stay on there, but it also gives other schools a reason to bash on Bodley! When telling someone, "I am from Fulton," some will look at you in disgust and think, "Well this person is disgusting." It is honestly all what you make it out to be.

What is so terrible about Fulton? We are a small town and should take advantage of the things that Fulton and Bodley actually have to offer. Honestly, there are millions of good things to say about G. Ray Bodley! Bodley's got every club and team besides maybe a few, and while they may not all be in the championship hunt, students are getting a chance to participate. Bashing on the school only shows that you clearly have no respect and contain a high level of immaturity.

There are always going to be problems occurring and you may complain a little bit, but make an effort to do something about it. G. Ray Bodley is where you spend the four years that prepare you for the rest of your life. You may not think of it that way, but it really is. Far too many people in the school do not appreciate the good things that Bodley has to offer.

could be the "I hate this school"

The questions that comes to mind is WHY? Why write that on the wall or even say that? If you really think about it, you have to spend four years here whether you like it or not and things will only change for the better if you take initiative.

If you really wanted to change the way the bathrooms look, or just something that should be changed, maybe you should join Stu-

One week remaining before start of AP exams

As the 2011-2012 school year starts to wind down, students are finishing up with their classes and starting to review for finals. For the most part, finals and regents are held in June, giving students plenty of time to prepare for the exams. However, there are some exams that are only a few weeks away.

Advanced Placement tests start on Monday, May 7. AP classes are college level courses, and they have a reputation for being fairly difficult. Only students with strong work ethics and overall good grades attempt these courses, because while they are often difficult, they are definitely worth the trouble. The AP exams are graded on a scale of 1 to 5, and in order to get credit at most colleges, student need to get at least a 3.

At G Ray Bodley, AP students will be taking exams include US History, Calculus AB, Biology, Chemistry, English, and both Macro and Microeconomics. At eighty-seven dollars apiece, no one wants to fail one of these tests. For most, the fees are not too steep, comparable courses at college can cost thousands of dollars. If a student can pass an AP test and get credit for it at college they can save quite a bit of money.

The AP tests span two weeks in May, from the seventh until the eighteenth. Students who are scheduled for these tests will be excused from school on the day of their exam. While some students may not think that this is fair, there are reasons that AP students get their test days off. These tests are a big deal and take a lot out of a person, going to school before or after them would be extremely counterproductive. Besides, it is not really a day off; there are very few people who actually enjoy taking an AP exam.

With only one week before the tests start, AP students are entering the final stretch. Everyone is hoping for at least a three, but unfortunately not everyone will succeed. All that can be expected is that students try their hardest and do the best that they can do.

Thrill-seekers risking their lives with sanitizer

By Natasha Luis

abuse common household items to curb or even to manage their addiction problems. From drinking common cold medicines to putting strange things up their noses, people are starting to see that these “new era drugs” are more harmful than the original ones.

Parents are becoming worried because of the way society is today, as no one really knows what is going on in their children’s lives. People are starting to think that the kids of the 90’s decade are ruthless and fearless! While these accusations may be true to an extent, the situation is ever changing as this generation of teenagers is continuously prone to new risks and dangerous habits. The newest of these strange and unusual experiments is ingesting hand sanitizer.

In places such as Los Angeles and Indianapolis, kids are actually drinking hand sanitizers to get drunk. Four cases of these incidents occurring have been reported to poison control this year alone. And since 2002, they have seen 41 cases statewide in Indiana. There were also 147 cases involving children ages 6 to 12 and 2,180 cases ages 0 to 5, believed to have accidentally ingested the gel. “It tastes pretty bad so to drink it, you have to really want to drink it,” said James Mowry, director of the Indiana Poison Center. He personally has seen thirteen cases of this abuse. In California doctors have seen more than a dozen different cases.

Doctors all over the United States are saying that drinking the sanitizer is worse than drinking the actual alcohol. In response to this they have put out a national warning about drinking hand sanitizer and telling parents that if they have any in their house to either dispose of it, or lock it up someplace.

Some kids are making the statement “Forget couch syrup, I have hand sanitizer!” and parents are truly becoming terrified! Doctors say that the best way for parents to know what their children are trying is to talk to them, see who their friends are, and what they are doing in their spare time. It is dangerous and the ages for these outrageous acts are getting younger and younger.

Physics whiz-kid creates breakthrough device

By Vanessa Langdon

Do you enjoy sciences of all kind? Are you a particular fan of physics? If so you could learn a thing or two from a physics mastermind from Nevada, 17 year old Taylor Wilson.

The teen has attempted to build his own reactor to study fission. The oddest part of the story is that he built said reactor in the basement of his family’s home. Wilson loves physics and always has since he began reading about nuclear physics while in the fifth grade. Then a year later he presented an hour long science fair project on the subject. In the sixth grade he gave an hour long presentation on nuclear physics that not an adult in the room understood!

Wilson is very serious about his reactor and study of nuclear fission. At the ripe age of 14 Wilson convinced the University of Nevada to allow him to use the basement at the school as his workshop to continue to build the reactor. He then became the youngest person to produce fusion! He solved such a highly complicated matter before he could legally drive!

At 17 he is a senior at the Davidson Academy for Profoundly Gifted Students. Attending such a prestigious high school, achieving what he has, he could go to any college that sparks his interest. But for such a bright teenager who has already taught a graduate level physics class, it really does not seem necessary.

But Wilson does not plan on squandering his talents and continuing to mess around with little experiments for the rest of his life; he plans on accomplishing a major goal, national security.

Wilson used his nuclear physics background to invent a device that can scan shipping containers for nuclear material. His version could be much more cost effective than the technology already in place. According to Wilson, “Because it’s incredibly cheap, it can be deployed all over the U.S. and all over the world, creating first, second and third lines of defense all over.”

As Taylor Wilson continues to achieve greatness, hoping to one day cure cancer, he is an inspiration to all teenagers to use their talents to improve upon society in any way they can, starting right now while they are still in high school.

Baseball's best nicknames maintain a tradition

By Ashlynn Palmitesso

Within every sport, nicknames exist, and baseball is known for its long tradition of nicknames. These names are not just given out, they are earned.

Sometimes they are created to amplify the player's talent, or sometimes they are extremely embarrassing.

Here are five well known baseball players with catchy nicknames to go along with their own game style.

At the top of the list is one of the greatest sluggers in the Red Sox's history, Big Papi. We all know Big Papi is David Ortiz, but his nickname was not created based on his ability to crush the ball. He was extremely forgetful and terrible with names so "Papi" was his filler for the unknown names. Now his name is synonymous with his autobiography Big Papi: My Story of Big Dreams and Big Hits.

The name David Ortiz is just a birth name and now his real name is Big Papi. "Wherever I go now, bro, that's what people call me," he said. "I'm serious. Whenever I come out of the dugout before a game, if it's in winter ball or spring training or the playoffs, the fans all start screaming it. Even in the Dominican Republic, where anyone can be 'papi,' that's what everybody calls me."

Trailing Big Papi is baseball's most insightful and quote-worthy player, Lance Berkman. A host of a Houston radio show asked him what he would name himself and he responded "Big Puma." Berkman explained his chosen nickname, "I said 'Big Puma,' because pumas are sleek, fast, powerful and secretive." It wasn't long before this name cultivated into the media and Berkman acolytes started dressing up as little pumas. He gave himself such a unique name that it prompts fans to see him in a different way.

Senior Lindsey Larkin helped the Raiders win a wild extra inning game against Mexico on Monday, coming through from both the plate and the mound and overcoming 10 fielding errors as Fulton prevailed 15-14 in ten innings. For the whole story, see Raider sports on page 6. (Ashlynn Palmitesso photo)

Jumping his way into third is the Kung Fu Panda, Pablo Sandoval of the San Francisco Giants. Pablo's nickname was created early in his career during a game against the Los Angeles Dodgers. Sandoval avoided a tag from Dodgers catcher Danny Ardin by jumping deftly into the air. His teammate Barry Zito compared him to the Kung Fu Panda from an animated action comedy film starring Jack Black. Now, panda hats are readily available on several websites.

Felix Hernandez and Shane Victorino placed fourth and fifth, respectively. Dave Cameron, the man at the head of the USS Mariner blog crowned Hernandez as "King Felix" due to his wondrous potential. Hernandez took a liking to his new name and named his dog King.

The Philadelphia Phillies roster is fulfilled with nicknames and Victorino is one of them. Shane was dubbed "Flying Hawaiian" after he soared into the air to make a phenomenal catch. Victorino estimated that six out of every ten Philles fan calls him Flying Hawaiian. Shane said, "When I walk the streets or go to opposing stadiums, it's hardly ever 'Shane. It's 'Flyin' Hawaiian, can you sign this?' I love it because that's my heritage. It represents where I'm from and who I am." Many of these players are as memorable as their nicknames and the uniqueness of them, whether chosen or given to them, is something that will stand by them for the rest of their careers.

Be on time for homeroom

The new policy requires late students to report to the attendance office if they are late to homeroom. This change will now make the late to homeroom students tardy. These tardies will show on a student's five week progress reports and report cards. Doing this extra step ensures that the tardy is marked in the main system.

According to Mrs. Parkhurst there are no consequences in place as of now for repeat tardy students, but that "policies will be instated based on numbers of tardies, specific consequences will be determined on a case by case basis. Parents may be called if it is a chronic problem and then a plan will be made to ensure that the student is getting to school on time to be successful."

The long story short is that students need to arrive at school on time to chat with their friends and still make it to homeroom on time. If someone is not prepared to get up a little earlier they may have to cut back on their chitchat before homeroom if they want to keep tardiness on their report card to the very minimum and avoid a meeting with Principal Mrs. Parkhurst and parents. So 7:35 am is the time to remember, as students need to be in their seat or they will be considered tardy for the day.

Girls hang tough in 15-14 marathon triumph

By Ashlynn Palmitesso

They had to work overtime to do it, but the Lady Raiders softball team edged out a win in the tenth inning against the Mexico Tigers on Monday. The sun may not have been shinning, but at the end of the game the pride on the front of the Raiders t-shirts was glowing. It was a long and frustrating day for the diamond girls but they kept their composure to get by the Tigers 15-14.

The bats were cooking in the first inning. Senior Lindsey Larkin started the day off with a double to right field and Keisha Pierce turned into a single. To top those hits, Lauren Snyder clobbered the ball to leg out a triple. The Lady Raiders wrapped up the first inning with a two run lead, 3-1.

The second inning was full of excitement for the softball girls. The defense stood strong when Larkin prevented a base hit by stripping the ball of its velocity so that shortstop Cassidy Kearns could hustle to her position to make the play to end the inning. The momentum carried over to the batters box as junior Ashley Cummings marked her territory in the Tigers den by stealing second while sophomore Cassidy Kearns followed her footsteps to first base through a walk.

The Raiders were back to the top of the lineup with power hitter Lindsey Larkin, who cranked her second double of the game scoring Cummings and Kearns. Keisha Pierce was in the mood for singles, hitting her second single of the contest to bring home Larkin. The steaming bats did not stop here, as Felicia Coleman hit a shot to the Tigers second basemen causing her to fumble the ball and allowing Felicia to record a double. To mark another run in the book, senior Lauren Snyder sent home Coleman with her sacrifice fly ball. The scoreboard read 7-1 Raiders after two innings of play, a lead they increased to 11-3 by scoring four more runs in the third.

The Tigers chipped in two runs when an outfielder failed to abide by the basic catching law, squeezing the mitt. The Raiders roared back to the Tigers when Maureen McCann stepped up to the plate. A line drive sounded good for her dinner but Ashley Cummings decided to join her for some dessert when she sent a dribbler between the first base and second base gap to score Fulton scored a season high 15 runs, including 11 in the first three innings, but had to rally twice before posting a 15-14 win over Mexico in extra innings on Monday. Maureen. To ice the cake, Keisha Pierce tripled, bringing in two more runs to create a eight run lead, 11-3.

The fifth inning was a disaster for the diamond girls. The rain began to pick up the pace just like the Tiger bats began to rally against the Raider defense. Frustration all around the field took a toll on these girls, but they weren't willing to give up. Coach Derek Lyons and Cory Zion worked to reinforce the positive spirit to bring these girls back together, but that was not enough to prevent the Tigers from pouncing around the bases to close the gap.

Mexico scored seven times in the fifth inning and added three more in the sixth to turn an 11-3 deficit into a 13-12 lead. Fulton rallied for a single run in the bottom of the sixth, and after a scoreless seventh frame, the teams went into extra innings, squared at 13-13.

The Raiders and Tigers could not get around the bases in the seventh, eighth, and ninth inning, but it all changed when the international extra inning rule was enforced in the tenth inning. Both teams started the last girl up to bat from the previous inning at second base. The Tigers were able to squeeze out a run when the runner blocked Kearns sight from a ball hit near second base. Coach Derek Lyons and the other teammates couldn't bear to watch each pitch. They paced in and out of the dugout while covering their eyes.

But the Raiders ended the top of the tenth with only a one run deficit. However, their determined bats filled up the bases with Ciara Chapman on third. A passed ball scored Ciara and Mikayla Guernsey hit in the winning run to end the nailbiting thriller. The Raiders could finally breathe now and their pride began to glow again.

The Raiders scored a season high of 15 runs but committed ten errors while improving to 4-3 overall. Coach Lyons looked past that, saying, "We made several routine errors, but in the moment, you can't fix that. But you make sure the girls have their heads up because in the end our positive attitude trumped our mistakes."

Tennis blanks Cortland, jumps to 6-0 on year

By Alex J. Bawarski

And the dominance continues!

G. Ray Bodley's boys tennis team shut down Cortland 6-0 on Monday in their second meeting of the season to boost their overall team record to 6-0. The Raiders keep playing tough and although there was some rain to slow down the pace of the matches, the Fultonians brought the heat, like they have been doing a lot this season.

Taking home a brilliant win for Fulton at first singles was Mitch Lalik, who not only defeated Cortland's Kyle Davis 6-0, 6-1, but also increased his own personal record at his position to 6-0. Second singles man, Eric Naioti, also was boosted up to a 6-0 personal record after bringing G. Ray Bodley a 6-1, 6-2 win over Jacob Passalugo. Dan Wahl played a strong fourth singles match against Nicholas Franceschelli, winning 6-4, 6-1.

Third singles starred Nathan Deavers playing against Cortland's Devin MacHenry, but the match was closed down half way through the second set. Mr. Deavers is up 3-2 in the second set after taking his first set 6-4."I felt like I was in a good position to win," he said, "but I know I can go back and play just as well." Nate is scheduled to continue this match tonight after Fulton's match at East Syracuse-Minoa.

Alex Bawarski and Joe Medico bumped their personal first doubles record up to 5-1, after quickly handling their match against Michael Morgan and Michael VanDonsel 6-0, 6-1. The second doubles team of Brian Garrett and Zach Mizerer took home a strong 6-2, 6-1 win, battling past Cortland's Kaleb Fairbanks and Kristian Reynolds, increasing their personal record to 5-0. Brad Crofoot played third doubles with Neil Devendorf for the first time, bringing Fulton a 6-2, 6-2 win at that position.

Fulton still has three more matches this week; at ES-M tonight, at Mexico on Wednesday, and home against Jamesville-DeWitt on Friday. Although many of the players might be fatigued, they continue to battle through and play strong. This team has what it takes to win matches quickly, effectively and in style. They are going to have to keep it up, with so many tough matches this week.

Mexico blanks Raider batsmen

The second of two games in the Fulton-Mexico diamond rivalry was played last night. Earlier in the season the Raiders prevailed in 10-9 thriller. However this time around it was all Mexico (1-7), who came away with a 10-0 triumph over Fulton (1-10).

The home Tigers rattled off 12 hits, having big innings in the second and sixth while posting a four spot in each frame. Senior Nick Dolbear led the home team from the plate and on the hill smacking two hits, a double and an RBI. From the bump, Dolbear threw seven shutout innings, allowing eight hits and fanning seven. CJ Loomis, Jake Deno and Greg Nellis also had big days, as each had two hits respectively. Robert Wallace, John Easman, and Eamon Lacey each likewise chipped in a hit.

For Fulton, the struggles continued as they were once again held scoreless. Senior Dan Kenyon raised his average to the .300 mark with his two hit performance. Seniors Jordan LeClair (.222), Tyler Terramaggi (.409), Tyler French (.167), Brandon Guernsey (.217) and Dan Bolster (.100) as well as junior Cody Dick (.241) all chipped in one hit a piece.

However while having eight hits, the Raiders could not find a way to scratch across runs as timely hitting seems to be the Raiders downfall this season from the plate. LeClair also started on the mound giving up six earned runs and nine hits in 5.1 frames of hard work.

By Tyler Terramaggi

Laxmen claim defensive struggle, 4-3

The Raider Boys lacrosse team pulled out their fifth win of the season in a low scoring affair over the visiting Corcoran Cougars, 4-3, on a mild Saturday afternoon.

Senior Ross Maxam had three assists in the contest and Joe Sutton added two of his own goals to lead the Raiders. Steven Hanczyk also added two points on a goal and assist and sophomore Seth DeLisle continued his scoring ways for the Raiders by scoring another on a man-up snipe.

Leading the Cougars was Alex Waelder, who scored two goals for the Corcoran cause, and Sean Eccles added one of his own, but it was not enough.

The defense was fronted by an outstanding performance from sophomore close defender Mark Pollock, who made the transition to midfield to shut down Waelder, and was successful in doing so. Senior netminder Colin Blake finished with 12 saves, good for a .800 save percentage, a career high for the two year starter.

The game was part of a full day of lacrosse for the Fulton program. The modified team kicked it off with their first home game of the year on the turf, followed by J.V. at noon and the varsity team at 2. All three teams picked up the wins and thus ensued a celebratory barbecue at the athletic complex. Many past alumni, family, and friends of all levels attended and it was a great way to have camaraderie in the program.

The Raiders will be back in action on Thursday when they travel to Jamesville-Dewitt to face the state ranked Red Rams in what will be a good test of how far the Raiders have come since the start of the year.
