

Section 3 tournament openers announced

The road to the Section 3 title begins this week with a trio of Red Raider teams in the hunt for championship glory. The girls and boys soccer teams will charge into action on Tuesday while the Raider football squad opens sectional play on Friday.

Coach George Beckwith's #9 seeded girls soccer team will open tournament play on the road at Carthage on Tuesday while Coach Murray's boys host Whitesboro in a 3 pm Tuesday start. Both sides enter the sectionals in good form as the 7-6-3 Raider girls have side is rounded out by a Tuesday match sending #11 Central Valley Academy to #6 Cortland that will decide who plays #3 Watertown in the second round.

On the gridiron the #8 seeded Red Raider football team faces the unenviable task of travelling to #1 seed Indian River on Friday for a 6:30 pm kickoff. The Warriors are 6-1 and have outscored Section 3 opponents 211-39 so far this season, their only loss coming to non-league LaSalle. The winner of Friday's contest collides with the survivor of Friday's #5 at #4 clash between Whitesboro and Jamesville-Dewitt. The other first round match-ups send #7 New Hartford to #2 East Syracuse-Minoa and #6 Nottingham is at #3 Carthage.

Look for a preview of Fulton's first round soccer matches and the entire playoff bracket in tomorrow's edition of RaiderNet Daily.

What's in a name tag? No real purpose

By Caitlin Chrisman

Last week, upon returning from the Columbus weekend break, students were informed of a new policy requiring them to wear their student ID at all times.

While this is a good idea in some ways, the logic behind wearing school IDs is not very reasonable. The main focus of the school should not be whether the student body is wearing their IDs, but on the fact that the students understand what they are learning, and not taking the time out of teaching to write referrals for students who are not wearing their name tags.

The fact that the teachers and administrators are on lookout for students who are not wearing a name tag is absurd. Although I do see both sides of the story, I don't see why some teachers are being so hard core on the student body. I understand the fact that we need to know who is in our building at all times because of recent tragedies including Sandy Hook and Columbine, but overall I believe that if the administrators weren't so uptight about things, kids would listen to them more.

The only time that school IDs are a reasonable request is to enter school functions. Don't get me wrong, school IDs are a good thing, but the fact that students are getting discipline points for not wearing them around their necks seems absurd. If a student gets into a fight who happens to be wearing his or her lanyard at the time, there is a perfect opportunity for the opponent to use the lanyard as a choking weapon. So not only are the school lanyards a pain in the neck, but they are also a threat to the students safety.

French Teacher Mrs. Honeywell said, "I won't let the writing of students up affect the way I teach; I will do my job as a teacher but also enforce the rules as well." Most teachers will not let writing students up and fighting with students for not wearing their IDs affect their jobs, but there are a handful of them who will. The administrators tried to enforce wearing the school lanyards last year and it didn't seem to work, so what makes them think that it will work this year? By making it such a big deal, it is making students rebel even more.

help you to get over him; it will just end up making things harder.

Finally, another way to get closure is to just talk to him and ask him why he felt things weren't the same anymore. This can help you quit wondering what happened between you two. Closure is very important in a breakup.

Getting over him will not happen overnight. It is definitely going to take some time and effort, especially because you two were together for so long. However, if you keep your head held high and your spirits up, you will be surprised at how easy moving on will be. Dr. Seuss once said, "Don't cry because it's over, smile because it happened." Thank you so much for emailing me and I hope this helped.

Give this double-layer cheesecake a while

By Tevin Simard

This innovate dessert combines both the great taste of pumpkin pie and cheesecake into one. It has been rated five stars out of five by 1847 users on allrecipes.com and is sure to be well-liked by many.

A great alternative to pumpkin pie, especially for those cheesecake fans out there. Serve topped with whipped cream. Stephanie Phillips

Ingredients:

- 2 (8 ounce) packages cream cheese, softened
- 1/2 cup white sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 eggs

- 1 (9 inch) prepared graham cracker crust
- 1/2 cup pumpkin puree
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 pinch ground cloves

- 1 pinch ground nutmeg
  - 1/2 cup frozen whipped topping, thawed
- Directions
1. Preheat oven to 325 degrees F (165 degrees C).
  2. In a large bowl, combine cream cheese, sugar, and vanilla. Beat until smooth. Blend in eggs one at a time. Remove 1 cup of batter and spread into bottom of crust; set aside.
  3. Add pumpkin, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg to the remaining batter and stir gently until well blended. Carefully spread over the batter in the crust.
  4. Bake in preheated oven for 35 to 40 minutes, or until center is almost set. Allow to cool, then refrigerate for 3 hours or overnight. Cover with whipped topping before serving.

Ask Myrtle:

Breaking up is hard to do

Dear Myrtle,

Last weekend, my boyfriend of a year and a half broke up with me. He said that he "wasn't feeling it any more." I didn't even know how to respond to that because in my opinion things were going better than ever. I was finally letting myself get close to him, which is not something that I let happen often, and now I am completely devastated.

I want to get over it and move on, but when I try to picture how my life will be without him in it, I can't. He said we could still be friends, and I want that, but I don't know how it would work. It will be so hard for me to see him every day and know that he's no longer my boyfriend.

I know I sound kind of obsessed in a way, but he was my boyfriend for so long. He was the longest relationship I have ever had, and he was my first love. We shared so many good memories together and I feel like they are all insignificant now. I don't know what to do or how to even begin to try moving on. Sincerely,

"Heart Broken"

Dear "Heart Broken:"

Going through a breakup is never easy, whether it's lasted a week, or a year. However, you need to find a way to keep your spirits high, because it becomes so easy to just crawl into your shell and hide (figuratively speaking, of course). Although this may be difficult for you, you can't change the way that he feels, you can only learn to move on from it. 'im not saying that there is no chance of you two getting back together, because nobody really knows what the future holds, I'm saying that instead of holding on to something that could potentially not happen, you should learn to move on and be able to accept that you two aren't together.

Of course, with you two being together for so long, you will have many memories, and they may be hard for you to look back on. My advice to you is to look at them with fond memories of your past so that way when you get older, you remember the good things, rather than the negative.

As for him wanting to still be friends, it is perfectly normal for you to be uncomfortable with that at first. You should become friends with him, whenever you are ready. With him being the one who broke the relationship off, he should be able to understand that you are hurt, and you need to take time to be ready before you and him start a friendship again.

As for ways to try to move on, I feel that joining any extra-curricular activities would be very beneficial. Clubs and sports are great ways to meet new people. It's also a great way for you to get your mind off of thinking about him and get your mind on other things. One thing that is very important for being able to move on, is getting rid of (or putting away) everything that he has ever given you, or anything you have that may have some sort of memory of him, such as pictures, notes, etc. This is very important because if you have things around that give you a constant reminder of him, you will always be thinking about him, which won't
