Current skiing better than you think

The G. Ray Bodley High School Ski and Snowboard Club departed for Labrador Mountain on Tuesday, January 14, to an unpleasant sight of grass in between trails. Although the sight of grass seemed eerie, the ski conditions themselves were much better than expected. The terrain park was open along with many of the larger trails. The weather was warm and the lines were fast, combining for a very ski worthy night.

With the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday upon us and some colder weather and snow in the forecast, this weekend has all the makings of being a good one for hitting the slopes.

Be sure to check the mountain/resort's websites prior to visiting for the latest conditions and trail numbers. As of Thursday afternoon, the conditions for local resorts was:

Labrador Mountain,	12 trails (www.labradormountain.com)
Greek Peak,	15 trails (www.greekpeakmtnresort.com)
Song Mountain,	13 trails (www.songmountain.com)
Toggenburg Mountain,	13 trails (www.skitog.com)
Woods Valley,	11 trails (www.woodsvalleyskiarea.com)

NFL Picks

Super Bowl on the line as familiar foes collide

Mr. Senecal

Last week: 4-0
Overall: 108-62

Should I go with my head, or my heart? Well, considering the fact that I will be watching these two games, I'm going to pick the teams that I plan on rooting for this weekend, even though that might not work out in the long run.

San Francisco travels to Seattle for the second time this season, and we all know about the famed "Twelfth Man," the Seahawk crowd, which has a habit of making it really tough on opposing quarterbacks. The last time the Niners ventured north they were clobbered 29-3, but that was all the way back in week two. The 49ers gained a measure of revenge in early December in a 19-17 struggle, which is the type of game most are expecting again this time around.

A pair of exciting young quarterbacks go head to head in SF's Colin Kaepernick and Seattle's Russell Wilson. But for some reason Willson and the Seahawk offense have not been firing on all cylinders over the past few weeks, while San Francisco has used Frank Gore, Michael Crabtree and Anquan Boldin to good effect in playoff wins at Green Bay and Carolina. If they continue to shine against a tough Seahawk defense and the 49ers can avoid their nasty habit of settling for field goals, the boys in gold and red could be headed to their second straight Super Bowl.

The AFC battle between veteran and future Hall of Fame quarterbacks Peyton Manning and Tom Brady should also be a dandy, with Denver still stinging from their 34-31 loss at New England in late November that saw them blow a 24-0 lead. Brady has had Peyton's number, and that may well be the case again this weekend, but as a Dolphins fan I simply CANNOT pick the Patriots. I'm likely wrong, and it won't be the first time, but I'm pulling for a San Francisco vs. Denver Super Bowl!

Jason Mattice

Last week: 2-2
Overall: 101-69

New England has made it to the AFC championship game where they travel to Denver to take on Peyton Manning and the explosive Broncos. This game is one that has two of the best quarterbacks in NFL history as both Tom Brady and Peyton Manning had huge seasons like they have done so many times in the past.

The Patriots have come out with a running attitude in these playoffs as last week Lagarrette Blount had 166 rushing yards with four touchdowns against the Colts, a game the Patriots won 43-22. The Broncos are favorites in this game and I think that they will win this one in a shootout.

The Seahawks and 49ers are facing off for the NFC championship game in Seattle. The Seahawks are 15-1 in their last 16 games at home. Running back Marshawn Lynch will be the factor for Seattle. If he can run the ball and get first downs then Seattle should be able to win, but if he can't Russell Wilson will struggle against the tough 49er defense. This game should be a tough defensive game that could come down to a field goal, but in the end Seattle will win in a close one and head to MetLife Stadium in New Jersey.

Jason's picks:

Denver
Seattle

Jimmy Martin

Last week: 1-3
Overall: 96-74

San Francisco @ Seattle

The San Francisco 49ers travel to Seattle to take on the Seahawks. Since the game is at Seattle, the Seahawks will have the advantage of the 12th man in one of the loudest stadiums. The 49ers lost 29-3 when they visited Seattle, but won 19-17 when at home. This game should come down to the wire.

I think Seattle has the upper hand in this game since they are at home. The Seahawks have the best defense in the league and it was shown when they played the Saints. Marshawn Lynch showed that he was unstoppable, rushing for two touchdowns. Russell Wilson needs to be more accurate with his passes to be more effective. The 49ers are just one step away from where they were last year. Just like Seattle, San Fran has a good rushing game behind Frank Gore. Colin Kaepernick showed he can run the ball when needed to help the 49ers out. Seattle will win this game by less than a touchdown.

New England @ Denver

This game features two veteran quarterbacks who know how to win games. Both Tom Brady and Peyton Manning had completion percentages over 60%. Unlike the NFC final, the offenses are strong, while the defenses are their weak ends.

The Pats and Broncos only met once this year and it was a close one with New England winning 34-31 in overtime. Both these teams have put up a lot of points, so it will be another close one. I believe Manning can lead the Broncos to a Super Bowl. He threw for 55 regular season touchdowns and probably will not stop. Brady did not have an impressive numbers year, but still wants to show he can lead the Pats to another Super Bowl. I think Denver will win, but it could come down to the final couple of minutes.

Who do you expect to win the Super Bowl?

"Denver Broncos because I hate the Patriots."

Mrs. Hawley

"The 49ers because they have the best seven on both sides of the ball."

Mr. Halladay

"Seattle Seahawks."

Kirby Labeef

"Denver all the way."
