Opinion

What's good for the goose is good for the gander

By Brandon Ladd

Some police officers may be sitting in the wrong seat of the car, literally.

The security cameras that are on some police cars can either make or break a conviction. These cameras catch a lot of criminal behavior that happens in view of the car.

However, with all these crimes caught on tape, not all of them are by a civilian. In some cases where video evidence from the police vehicle was brought to court it showed a little more than the crime being enacted. These cameras have caught officers of the law breaking the very laws which they swore to uphold. Some of these video recordings presented evidence of police brutality, unlawful searches, racial bias, and failure to enact the law according to procedure.

“Some departments have removed these cameras due to the incriminating behavior of their employees being caught on tape and putting blemishes on their reputation as upholders of the law.”

Last year the St. Louis Police Department began using cameras mounted in patrol cars to record officers' encounters with suspects and other aspects of their on-the-job behavior. Such dash cameras, which have been used in this country for 15 years or so, can help police as well as the people they arrest by backing up details of police reports, providing evidence of crimes such as driving while intoxicated, and disproving false complaints of misconduct.

There is a lot of evidence that is being missed in some crimes due to the fact that officers are trying to avoid driving a police vehicle with a camera on it. They avoid these vehicles so that any incriminating behavior performed by them will not be admissible in any form. We all know that when it comes down to it, without any actual visual evidence, any attempt to disprove an officer in any way will surely not go smoothly for you.

Without evidence, it is your word against theirs and everybody knows who will win in the end.

To be more specific, there have been several cases in which a police officer was caught striking handcuffed people. But that is not to say that most police officers are like this. There are always some people somewhere who believe that with their position they can break any law they wish without consequence. Some departments have removed these cameras due to the incriminating behavior of their employees being caught on tape and putting blemishes on their reputation as upholders of the law.

These cameras must be a great way to catch all criminals on tape. Well, unless it is someone with a position to uphold. I mean what's the world coming to when the police can no longer punch handcuffed prisoners or violate firearm rules with impunity? The local police union wants restrictions on supervisors' authority to review camera footage, so officers will be have a clearer sense of when they are being watched. So apparently it is alright for evidence to be reviewed beforehand to scan for any illicit police behavior? I think that the cameras should be in place on all cars and evidence should be shown without review. The facts need to be displayed as is, and not selected to enhance the image of certain individuals.

Nutella based cookies are worth the bother

By Tevin Simard

Bringing Nutella, Chocolate Chips, and Sea Salt together?

This recipe is one for deliciousness and, possibly excess, but one that is completely worth it. These cookies are so good that you may want to make them when no one else is home, just so you can eat them alone later.

Prep time: 2 hours

Cook time: 10 mins

Total time: 2 hours 10 mins

Ingredients:

2 1/4 cup all-purpose flour
 1 1/4 teaspoons baking soda
 1/4 teaspoon of salt
 2 sticks (1 cup) unsalted butter
 1 1/4 cup packed dark brown sugar
 1/4 cup granulated sugar
 1 large egg plus 1 egg yolk
 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract
 1 tablespoon plain greek yogurt
 3/4 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips
 1/2 cup milk chocolate chips
 1/2 cup dark chocolate chips
 1 jar of Nutella, chilled in refrigerator
 Coarse sea salt for sprinkling

Instructions

1. Whisk together the flour, baking soda, and salt in a bowl and set aside. Melt butter in a saucepan over medium heat. The butter will begin to foam. Make sure you whisk constantly during this process. After a couple of minutes, the butter will begin to brown on the bottom of the saucepan; continue to whisk and remove from heat as soon as the butter begins to brown and give off a nutty aroma. Immediately transfer the butter to a bowl to prevent burning. Set aside to cool for a few minutes.
2. With an electric mixer, mix the butter and sugars until thoroughly blended. Beat in the egg, yolk, vanilla, and yogurt until combined. Add the dry ingredients slowly and beat on low-speed just until combined. Gently fold in all of the chocolate chips.
3. Chill your dough for 2 hours in the refrigerator, or place in freezer for 30 minutes if you are super eager, although I cannot promise the same results if you do this.
4. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees F. Once dough is chilled measure about 1 1/2 tablespoons of dough and roll into a ball. Flatten the dough ball very thinly into the palm of your hand. Place 1 teaspoon of chilled nutella in the middle and fold dough around it; gently roll into a ball ó it doesn't have to be perfectly rolled! Make sure that the nutella is not seeping out of the dough. Add more dough if necessary. Place dough balls on cookie sheet, 2 inches apart and flatten with your hand VERY gently. (Really only the tops need to be flattened a bit!)

5. Bake the cookies 9-11 minutes or until the edges of the cookies begin to turn golden brown. They will look a bit underdone in the middle, but will continue to cook once out of the oven. Cool the cookies on the sheets at least 2 minutes. Sprinkle with a little sea salt. Remove the cooled cookies from the baking sheets after a few minutes and transfer to a wire rack to cool completely. Repeat with remaining dough.

NFL free agency starts quickly

It seems like only yesterday that the Seattle Seahawks won it all, but in all reality it has only been a little over a month. But that does not mean that there aren't big things happening the NFL. The Free Agency market has turned some heads this year with major signings and cuts. Some of the signings were not surprising, but then some were.

To start off, cornerback Darrelle Revis was released from the Bucs and, of all teams, was signed by the New England Patriots. Revis used to play for the Jets and faced Patriot quarterback Tom Brady many times, but now is on their roster. He remains as one of the best corners around.

So far, the Denver Broncos have had a spectacular couple of days by improving their defense. After the Cowboys released DeMarcus Ware for cap room, Denver quickly signed him. Ware will help Von Miller with the pass rush. They also signed cornerback Aqib Talib to help their secondary. The Eagles signed Darren Sproles from the Saints to help with their already dominant running game. Finally, after having troubles with Richie Incognito, beleaguered Miami Dolphins lineman Jonathan Martin has found a new team. Martin will now play for the 49ers reuniting with his former college coach, Jim Harbaugh..

Not only has the free agency market been the topic, so has the draft. This year's NFL Draft is May 8th and there has been a lot of talk about it. Some of the big names this year are Jadeveon Clowney, Johnny Manziel, Khalil Mack, and Blake Bortles. A lot of people are wondering where Manziel, Heisman Trophy winner as a freshman and a finalist last season will go, but only time will tell.
