

Raider bowler signs on with Division I powerhouse

Mikayla Guernsey has made a habit out of throwing strikes on the bowling alley and the softball diamond. On Monday the G. Ray Bodley High School senior was able to strike it big as she struck pen to paper and signed a Division I letter of intent to attend Robert Morris-Illinois University on a combination athletic/academic scholarship.

With her family, teammates and coach all watching on, Mikayla became the first Fulton bowler in school history to accept a Division I scholarship, signing on with the XBowling Intercollegiate Team Champion Eagles, who are based out of Chicago. And as someone who has always let her accomplishments both on and off the field do the talking, the shy senior was thrilled but reserved as the spotlight was pointed straight in her direction.

Coming off a senior season that saw her lead the OHSL in average for the second year running while helping guide Fulton to its second undefeated campaign in three years, the talented Raider admitted that she was a little bit embarrassed by all the attention.

But it was a well-deserved moment for a young woman who capped her high school bowling career by placing first in the entire state in this year's NYSPHSAA Championship, where she showed her usual grace under pressure while sending the pins flying for a six game total of 1,280. And as gracious as she is talented the two sport all-league performer also captured the Section III Sportsmanship award for bowling along the way while helping Fulton compile an incredible 41-1 record over the past three seasons and an impressive mark of 75-7-2 during her six year tenure on the Raider varsity.

A bowler since the age of three, Mikayla recalled her first memory on the lanes as, "bumper league when I was really young." As a member of the Raider varsity from seventh grade on, she started to realize her aptitude for the game, "maybe sophomore year. At states for individual I did really well."

Consistency has been her trademark over the years, along with a philosophy that enables her to quickly leave a poor effort in the rear view mirror. "I try not to let one bad game or one bad frame dictate how the rest of the day is going to go," she commented. "I'm pretty consistent." That attitude led her to the top of the OHSL and all of New York State, but there is far more to Mikayla Guernsey than her ability on the bowling alley.

"It's a combination of talent, natural ability and work ethic," Fulton Coach Mike Tryniski noted. "It's not enough to be talented. You still have to put the work in." And work at the game she does, bowling somewhere in the neighborhood of 27-36 games a week depending on tournaments, as she has been involved in a pair of Saturday leagues along with her participation on the Raider bowling team.

"She usually sets a goal and then goes after it," according to her mother Kelly Guernsey, who is understandably "very excited" about her daughter's great accomplishment. According to Fulton Athletic Director Chris (continued on page 3)

Action and romance highlight new releases

Feel like staying inside this weekend ad basking in some serious AC? Why not head to the movies for one of these brand new films?

Edge of Tomorrow This movie is perfect for action or science fiction fans. When an alien race attacks Earth with unrelenting force, Major William Cage is dropped into his first battle ever, even though he has never been in combat before. Cage dies after just a few short minutes and gets stuck in a time loop.

Major Cage is forced to relive the combat he experienced, and his own death repeatedly. His only chance to escape is to gradually gain combat skill and advance closer to beating the tyrannical enemy. This movie stars Tom Cruise, Emily Blunt, and Bill Paxton. Edge of Tomorrow is directed by Doug Liman and written by Christopher McQuarrie. This movie is rated PG-13 for intense sequences of sci-fi action and violence, language and brief suggestive material.

The Fault in Our Stars This one is a good choice for those who enjoy romantic films. When Augustus and Hazel find that they have a caustic sense of humor and a hate of conformity in common they quickly fall head over heels in love. What makes Hazel special is the oxygen tank that she must carry around everywhere she goes. Gus' odd feature is a prosthetic leg which becomes the butt of many of his jokes.

This dramatic romance begins when the two fall in love at a cancer support group. The Fault in Our Stars is written by Scott Neustadter and directed by Josh Boone, the screenplay is based on a New York Times bestselling novel of the same name. This film is rated PG-13 for thematic elements, some sexuality and brief strong language.

Guernsey excelled on lanes, field and in class

Ells, “less than one percent of all Americans get a Division I scholarship,” so Monday’s ceremony was even more special.

Another factor setting Mikayla apart from her peers is her outstanding performance in the classroom, where she is ranked fourth in the graduating class of 2014 at GRB. “We’re very proud of her,” her father Mike Guernsey stated. “It’s been a great four years.” Coach Tryniski was also quick to point out Mikayla’s accomplishments in school, referring to her performances “in academics and as a standout bowler.”

Great coaching has been one factor in her bowling resume, as both Tryniski and former Raider Coach Marge Mallette helped to mold her high school career, while her early years were shaped by her grandfather Jerry Guernsey, who still works with the young bowlers at Lakeview Lanes in Fulton.

Chicago beckons in the fall, and although Mikayla admitted that, “I’m a little nervous because I don’t really know anyone,” she won’t be alone in that regard with the highly rated Robert Morris team. According to her father she will be rooming with two other bowlers from Florida and one from California, clearly showing the national reach of the NAIA powerhouse under Coach Dale Lehman.

Having his daughter move one time zone away and into one of the biggest cities in the world will be tough, he admitted, but he and the family are hoping to watch Mikayla perform in December when the Eagles will take part in a pair of major tournaments in Pennsylvania.

Winners announced for GRB’s “Cupcake Wars”

The G. Ray Bodley High School Cupcake Wars have finally come to an end, and as a result four Bodley students will be shuffling off to Buffalo in the near future. The winning team consisted of Kristen Budd, Rylie Bush, Michaela Whiteman, and Caitlin Chrisman, who combined to produce their winning flavor which was a white chocolate raspberry cupcake.

The final round was based on presentation, with the theme of the Red Carpet. A lot of time and effort went into this project including three weeks time after school, and during school at any free moment. Their finals opponents were Travis Race, Zach Pettit, and Kyle Bardin, who pulled through all three rounds, but finished second in the final tally.

The girls will travel to Buffalo sometime next week to present their winning cupcake. Rylie Bush, one of the girls on the winning team said, “it was a lot of hard work and dedication, but I had fun while doing it.” The event organizer, Home and Careers teacher Mrs. Hawley, stated that “it’s a very stressful time but it is a fun one.” The team was congratulated on the GRB news webcast and were represented as the GRB Cupcake Winners.

This day in history: June 6

Invasion of Normandy, goodbye to The Ed Sullivan Show

On this day in 1944 a monumental historical event took place. This was the fateful day that the liberation of France began by the Allied forces, which would lead to freedom for the entire region of Western Europe. The previous day, General Dwight Eisenhower gave the OK for Operation Overlord, which was the largest nautical operation in military history as 6,000 ships, landing crafts and other water bound vessels with over 176,000 troops stormed the area in the name of justice. Hitler greatly misjudged the attack and did not send troops to defend the attack points and reinforcements were required by the Germans, making their side delay greatly. By the end of the month, the Allied forces had close to a million men and 150,000 vehicles in Normandy to finish the attack across Europe.

The Ed Sullivan Show was a two decade long variety TV series that brought many actors to their fame. This day in 1971 was the final airing of that famous television program. Originally called Toast of the Town, this show televised the first performances live on TV. Elvis Presley appeared on the show as well as The Beatles, The Doors and Janis Joplin. The final show hosted Gladys Knight and the Pips on the final episode as performers.

In 1981, a terrible disaster happened when an Indian train attempted to avoid harming a cow. As the train passed on a bridge over the Baghmati River a cow trotted onto the tracks. In Hindu culture Cows are sacred, and this Hindu engineer attempted to brake as hard as possible to save the cow at any expense. The nine-car locomotive slid on the rails wet by monsoon like conditions and seven of the cars flew straight into the river. The cars instantly sunk into muddy waters and over 500 passengers were killed.

"Where in the world is The Raider?"

The Fugitives part 19: battle for Ugwadle B

By Neal Burke

Last time on The Fugitives: The battle on Ugwadle B is nearing its conclusion. Two of the three Project Legion soldiers have been defeated and both Fenris and Bloodstone are close to destroying the boilers. However, Lupo is still too frightened to reemerge and Nightclaw fell unconscious when he transformed back into Silver. And when they begin the chain reaction, will they make it out?

Find out now.

After several minutes, Opul finally got a link with Lupo. However, the frightened girl refused to even acknowledge her. While displeased at this, Opul understood. It would take more than just her to get Lupo back to normal, it would take everyone's help. Hearing a groan behind her, Opul turned to see that Silver was finally coming to. Sighing with relief, she knelt by his side and helped him to a sitting position. After shaking his head, he turned to her and smiled, though he did wrinkle his nose in disgust a little at the smell of the fluids that covered her. She flashed him a grin and playfully punched him in the shoulder.

"I've been worse," she told him. "I'll tell you that."

Silver chuckled at that but then suddenly hissed in pain.

"My back," he said through clenched teeth.

Opul looked the slash over but dared not touch it again for fear that the stuff covering her might cause infection. It wasn't too bad but would no doubt need treatment and they could do that once they got out of this place. Which reminded her, she needed to talk to Crystal and figure out what was going on. So placing her hand to the communicator in her ear, she tried to contact her.

XXXX

Back in the boiler room, the battle with the winged beast was drawing to a close. Fenris had put away his AC-37, opting to finish the thing off with his fists. Suffering from exhaustion, the winged beast couldn't heal as fast and couldn't attack as well either. It threw a sloppy punch at Fenris which he easily dodged before hitting it in the face with a heavy kick. The creature flew back and slammed into the wall before collapsing to the floor. Though it didn't stay that way for long and slowly staggered to its feet. It tried one last time to fly at him, claws ready to stab but Fenris grabbed its left arm and Judo flipped the creature over his shoulder.

When the creature hit the floor, it hit so hard that its wings broke with loud CRACKS! It let out a shriek of agony as it writhed and wriggled, now in so much pain that it couldn't get back up. Grinning, Fenris knelt beside the creature and pulled its hair back, wanting to see its true face before he killed it. What he saw was a human like face with pitch black eyes like a doll. It also had two visible fangs, much like a vampire. Fenris gave the thing one final sneer before slamming his fist down hard on its face, smashing its skull and spraying blood in all directions. Then he looked to Bloodstone and gave her a nod before sighing and transforming back into Ordin. Bloodstone nodded back and started typing on the computer's keypad to set the boilers to overload when her communicator began to beep. Answering the call, she heard Opul's voice.

"This is Bloodstone," she replied, still typing at the keyboard. "What's going on?"

"I was about to ask you the same thing." Opul told her, sounding a little surprised to hear Bloodstone's voice rather than Crystal's.

"We're setting the boilers to overload now," Bloodstone informed her. "You should start heading to the ship."

"Alright." Opul replied before signing off.

Bloodstone took a deep breath and punched in a few more commands until finally the boilers started hissing and smoking and the room started getting even hotter. Ordin had gotten to his feet and was now wheezing from the intense heat.

"Let's go," he managed to say. "Now!"

Bloodstone nodded before letting out a sigh and transforming back into Crystal. Then both she and Ordin began to run out of the room and up the stairs as fast as their legs could carry them as the boilers began to explode and facility began to destroy itself. Pipes along the walls began to spark and burst into flame as pieces of the wall and ceiling rained down on them. Once they were back in the tunnel where they had started, Crystal ran toward the door that Lupo and Silver had gone through only to find it shut and the control panel totally busted.

"Ordin," she exclaimed as she slammed her fists against the door. "We need to get this open and find them!"

It let out a shriek of agony as it writhed and wriggled, now in so much pain that it couldn't get back up. Grinning, Fenris knelt beside the creature and pulled its hair back, wanting to see its true face before he killed it.

Even though they didn't have too much time left before the place would be blown sky high, Ordin knew they had to help them. For all they knew, they could be hurt or trapped. Moving to the door, he told Crystal to stand back. She moved out of the way and Ordin slammed his fist into the door, creating a very noticeable dent. Repeating this attack again and again, he finally managed to bust through the door. Crystal was the first out and once she was on the platform, she searched around frantically for her baby sister and their friend. Just to be safe, she activated her communicator again to try and find her.

XXXX

Having helped Silver to his feet and now using her shoulder to help support him with his wounded back, Opul proceeded to lead him to the tunnel that led to the ship. Unfortunately, they had moved so deep into the facility that they weren't exactly sure where that tunnel was. Opul tried to think but was suddenly interrupted when several flaming debris came falling in their direction. Grabbing Silver, she moved them both out of the way as the debris crashed down onto the platform.

"We need to get moving, now!" Opul told him to which he responded with a nod.

Nodding back, she kept a good hold on him for support and began to run in the general direction that they had come from as more and more debris collapsed and crashed all around them. Giving Silver a heads up, Opul leapt into the air and onto a conveyor belt. While still moving in the direction she needed to, it was a little difficult to run in the opposite direction that the belt was moving. Suddenly a giant crusher exploded in front of her, sending both Silver and herself back a few feet. Opul's free hand landed on a very hot piece of metal and while she managed to pull it away quickly, not before it burned her palm. Being a little bit more resistant to pain than Lupo, she was able to pacify the cry of pain that wanted to come out to a grunt through clenched teeth.

"Are you okay?" Silver asked with concern as he looked at her burn.

"I'll be fine." she said, getting to her feet and jumping with him to another platform.

Given that she had fallen over, they had been carried back a bit by the conveyor belt and had lost some ground. This made her mad and she looked around for an easier way as the facility continued to collapse around them. That's when the communicator began to beep and when she answered it, she was relieved to hear Crystal's voice.

"Where are you guys?!" Crystal asked, very concerned.

"I'm not sure," Opul replied before getting an idea. She pulled out her AC-37 and fired a few blasts upward. "I'm firing my AC-37. If you can see the bolts, that's where we are."

After several shots, Opul finally got a response.

"I can see them." Crystal replied. "To save time, I'm gonna fire a few shots so you can see where we are."

Opul nodded and seconds later she saw several blue bolts coming from the far side of the facility. It wasn't too far, but they needed to act quickly, or else they'd all be blown sky high. Taking Silver in her arms, to make things a bit easier for her and being mindful of the wound on his back, Opul ran in the direction of the bolts, occasionally jumping to a new platform. The whole time, she had to dodge falling debris and be mindful of exploding tools. Finally, she met up with Ordin and Crystal and both gave her looks of shock when they saw her covered in blood, saliva and digestive juices.

"I'll explain later," she reassured them. "Right now we have to get out of here."

Ordin and Crystal both nodded in agreement and were soon heading through the busted doorway and motioned for Opul and Silver to follow.

"I think I can make it the rest of the way." Silver told her, as he looked up and smiled.

Opul smiled back and nodded. "Alright, but you be careful." She replied in a mock maternal tone as she put him down.

"I will, thanks." He replied with a grin before taking off through the doorway.

Opul just shook her head before following suit. She made it through the doorway just before falling debris sealed it shut. All four fugitives ran as fast as they could as the tunnel started to collapse around them. Wasting no time, Ordin lowered the ship's ramp and they all ran up it in almost no time at all. Once inside the ship, Ordin sat down at the pilot seat and powered the ship up for a quick exit. The ship lifted off the ground with a rumble and sending a ton of power to the boosters, Ordin got them out of the exhaust vent just as it began to spout flames rather than smoke. As he continued to guide the ship to the planet's atmosphere, a loud explosion was suddenly heard as the entire facility went up in flames. Given that the facility was underground the explosion created a large and deep crater with flames that reached the skies.

Once they were off the planet, everyone breathed a sigh of relief and relaxed for a moment. That's when Opul decided to try and talk to Lupo but before she could, she noticed everyone was looking at her and she knew what they wanted. She had to explain herself, not just the disgusting fluids covering her, but also why Lupo hadn't reemerged yet. She let out another sigh as she prepared to explain, she knew it wouldn't be easy.

The mission was a success and the facility has been destroyed! However, now that the mission is over, Opul has to explain herself as to why Lupo won't come out. Will she ever returned, or is she doomed to remain in this frightened state? And what of Bala? How will she react when she finds out the facility has been destroyed? Find out when The Fugitives returns.
