

Fultonian offers apology for yearbook problems

Mistakes do happen, and with that in mind the advisor and staff of the Fultonian Yearbook would like to offer a formal apology for any mistakes that were made pertaining to senior pictures in the recently released 2015 Fultonian Yearbook.

"No one feels worse than we do when this happens," Advisor Mr. Senecal commented after it was brought to his attention that several submitted senior portraits did not appear in the yearbook, instead replaced by photos from the school photographer.

"We work very hard, with a very small staff, to try and produce a mistake free yearbook, but mistakes happen, and for that I personally apologize."

"I'm not exactly sure what happened," he went on to say, "but I want to offer a sincere apology to anyone who was inconvenienced by this mishap. Believe me when I say that it most certainly was not intentional." Plans are already underway to find a method to avoid a similar situation in future yearbooks.

Mr. Nami (center) and the G. Ray Bodley High School Chorus put on a great performance on Wednesday as they said goodbye to a number of seniors. Our RaiderNet Daily reporters say goodbye today in their final issue of the 2014-15 school year. (Bre St.Onge photo)

His arms may be injured, but that hasn't stopped sophomore Daquan Davis from maintaining his Raider spirit, as he opted to have his casts wrapped in Fulton's "Royal Red and Green."

The last word:Goodbyes are never easy, but...it's time to go

By Cayla Weaver

The time has finally come to say goodbye to G. Ray Bodley High School. There are so many mixed emotions with this. At first, it did not really feel real that I am really graduating and leaving this place I have become so accustomed to, but it is real. I will not be coming back here this fall. Instead, I will be moving on and in college. This is a thought which brings both excitement and fear for me.

I will miss many things about G. Ray Bodley High School. I will miss HOPE Club. There is no club quite like it within this school. It truly is a special place. I will miss being on the yearbook staff. I will miss some of my teachers, several of whom I have had for a majority of my high school career. I will miss choir. I'll miss Mr. Nami's corny jokes which made the past four years in choir so enjoyable. I will even miss some of my classes. I will also miss a lot of the people I have gotten to know over the years who have made high school so much easier. It is a bittersweet time.

Looking back on my four years at G. Ray Bodley, I can honestly say I am so proud of everything I have accomplished. None of this would have been possible if it were not for the people in this school who have helped guide me and shape me into who I am today. I am thankful for every single person I have met in this building. It is scary knowing I will never walk these hallways again. I am both excited and sad to be leaving here.

To the underclassmen, treasure every single moment here. It goes by so fast and I am positive that you will miss GRB when you graduate. Work hard and you will succeed. There are people in this school who truly do care about you and want to help you. Best of luck to you all. Pretty soon you will be graduating too.

To the class of 2015: we did it! We have survived these past four years. It has been a roller coaster for us all, but we have survived. Now all that is left is to get through any finals or regents exams that you may have left to take. After that, the big day we have been preparing ourselves for over the past four years will finally be here: graduation.

Best of luck to the class of 2015 with wherever your future endeavors may bring you. Just never forget your time here. GRB is the place that has helped shaped us into who we are today.

So, this is it G. Ray Bodley High School, farewell.

It's about the journey, not the end result

By Lexi Abelgore

As a senior, I know how you are probably feeling this time of year. You are excited that the year is over, but you are wishing you were in the shoes of a senior. You wish that you didn't still have x amount of years remaining until the end of your high school career.

I'm sure you have heard this a lot, but take it from me, a senior, someone who has been in your position- cherish high school. It's not just about that fact that someday soon you will walk the stage and be done with GRB.

You will soon play your last game with your teammates. You will score your last point, take off your jersey and never put it on again. You will perform your last scene in a show with Quirks Players and take your final bows. You will sit through your last guided study hall and you will have your last laughs with the teacher that has been there for you all four years. You will shake hands with all the staff here that influenced you during your time here. You will hug your friends and say goodbye. Some of them you will never see again.

You will empty your lockers and take a final walk around the halls that you swore you hated. But believe me, you don't hate it here. You may think that you despise this place. I mean, there are some things that I don't agree with either, but you don't hate it here.

This place is a second home to you. You are given so many opportunities here and your life would not be the same had you grown up anywhere else. So listen to me- cherish high school. It is not all about the end result. It's about the journey.

Take care, be safe and enjoy the journey.

The future's uncertain, and that's just fine

By Chelsie Knopp

How does it feel to be a senior?

Being a senior has many ups and downs, there is no way to describe exactly how it feels, and in my opinion it still feels like we're upcoming freshman, just a little taller.

No longer do we need to ask to go to the bathroom or to go to the office, we are now going out on our own. Making our own decisions and moving on with our lives, trying to figure out on who we want to be and what we want to do in the world. With all the ups though there are going to be downs. It may seem like we are ready to get out in the world and be on our own, but in reality we are still those scared little kids going to school for the first time.

What do you want to be, what do you want to do, where do you see yourself in 10 years? These are the questions that have been asked since we first entered the high school. These questions were drilled into our brains scaring us every day and pressuring us into figuring out who we wanted to be. I'm here to say that it is okay not to know, it is okay not to be sure. There is no possible way that in four years you can figure out on who you want to be in the next seventy years. I've learned that it is impossible to know what's going to happen, because even if you are so set on being in the Navy or being a psychologist you might realize that it is not what you want to do, and that's one hundred percent okay. IT IS OKAY TO CHANGE YOUR MIND. Doing what makes you happy is the most important thing.

I spoke with several fellow seniors to seek their words of advice on this, their final regular class day as students at G. Ray Bodley High School, and this is what they had to say:

"Don't pressure yourself into believing something that you might disagree with in the near future"-Ryan Stanley

"Just be yourself and be who you want to be no matter who that person may be."-Emily Gould

"Don't take yourself too seriously and just have fun." -Lauren Gaido

"Hard work pays off in the end."-Jacob Seymour

"Finally."-Jennah Lamb

"High school does not define you as a person."-Emma Harvey

RND's triplets bid their fond farewells

I came into the high school knowing that these four years were going to drag on. Freshman year feels like it was 12 years ago. But, it also flew by at the same time.

It really is hard to explain. I know G. Ray Bodley has its issues, but at the end of the day this place is what made you who you are right now. (At least for me). I cannot imagine waking up in the morning and not coming here. Maybe you have had some teachers that teach in a way that is different than what you prefer, or maybe your friends have not always been the best and maybe you have had a rough patch in your school year, but trust me when I say, leaving this place will still make you sad; even if you think it will not.

I have formed bonds with so many teachers here who I will never forget. Along with learning a lot about science and math and English, etc., I learned a lot about who I am and who I want to be. I learned what a true friend is and have had the best times of my life with the people who shared these hallways with me. I will miss convincing teachers to let me roam the halls without a hall pass, eating in every class that I am in, and always having someone to talk to if I needed it.

I cannot express enough how this school has impacted my life, and I will be forever grateful. GRB is a good place with a kind-hearted staff; and I will always be a proud Fultonian.

It is so hard to believe that this is the last article I will ever write for RaiderNet Daily. This year has flown by so fast. If I knew it was going to fly by like this, I would have changed a lot of things.

I wish I could take back all of those days where I could not get out of school fast enough, or all those days where I just did not want to wake up at six in the morning. Underclassmen, the only advice I have for you is do not take your remaining years here for granted.

Believe it or not, you will be sad to graduate. We should all be happy that we were a part of such a great high school. Do not wish your years away, because when they are gone you will wish you appreciated them just a little bit more. Of course, do not forget to add journalism to your busy schedule next year! By Carly Williams

As I am about to graduate from G. Ray Bodley after four years, I have realized a few things.

* The teachers in this building really do care about you.

* Procrastinating is NO way to go through high school, or life in general.

* As Mr. Rothrock would say, "growing onions?" and being a strong person will get you much farther than letting people walk all over you.

* Do the work that teachers give you, it will 100% help you in that class.

* Having friends will make your experience in school so much more pleasurable. Don't be afraid to throw yourself out there!

* Focus on your work before your friends. Your friends will wait, your grades will not.

* Study for tests, even 10 minutes of studying can make a major difference between passing and failing a test.

* Going to sleep early will make you so much more prepared to wake up in the morning.

* Don't take anything for granted, because high school is over before you know it, take it from me. By Maggie Williams

Good luck on exams and have a great summer!
