

Raiders look to “spike Cancer” tonight

The girls varsity volleyball team will hold a “Spike Teal” volleyball match tonight in honor of their coach, who is battling Ovarian Cancer. The girls will be wearing teal shirts and headbands for the game and in school today the girls will be selling teal flowers, headbands, wristbands, shoe laces and ribbons.

There will also be more than 20 prize baskets being raffled off and one very special basket which has over $1000 worth of gift cards, shirts, bags and other small items all donated from stores and restaurants at the Destiny Mall.

During the varsity game there will be a small intermission and fans will have the chance to spike a volleyball and try to win some prizes. The girls team has already raised well over $1,500 and hopes their contribution really will help to find a cure for Ovarian Cancer.

Red Raider Coach Caroline Richardson has been coaching the volleyball team for 29 years and has led the team to over 400 career wins. Her love for the game is what keeps her going and she is an inspiration to many. Many of the other volleyball teams in the section will be coming to the game in support of her as well. The JV game will start at 5 pm, with the varsity to follow at 6:30 pm Tuesday in the gym.

Upset bids fall short for football, soccer Raiders

Fulton ran with the big boys in football and soccer, but in the end their highly ranked opponents came away with weekend ories. The Red Raider football team battled into the fourth quarter before falling 35-18 to #17 state-ranked East Syracuse-Minoa while two first half goals by #6 ranked Liverpool proved to be the difference for the Raider soccer team in a 2-1 non-league setback.

Fulton had ES-M on upset alert before running back Jeremy Perry took matters into his own hands in the game's final quarter. The converted tight end rambled into the end zone from 54, 10 and 46 yards away to turn a tense 14-12 contests into ES-M's fifth straight win and another OHSL title. Perry, a recent Channel 9 Athlete of the Week, ran for 411 yards and four touchdowns, carrying the ball 31 times on the night.

But it was anyone's game up to that point, as the teams traded touchdowns in the opening quarter and the score remained 6-6 into the third stanza. Perry's first touchdown and the ensuing two point conversion made it 14-6 Spartans, but Cody Green opened the fourth quarter with a seven yard TD scamper to bring Fulton back to within two points and hopes for the upset were alive.

It was all Perry from there, however, as the ES-M runner scored three unanswered touchdowns and ran his season total to 1324 yards through six games. By the time Frank Barbagallo scored on a 10 yard run, the Spartans had built a 35-12 advantage to leave the Raiders at 2-4 overall and 2-2 in league play.

Green also contributed a 15 yard scoring strike to Darrin Cooper in the first quarter, after Greg Buck had opened the scoring for ES-M from four yards out.

The Raiders will conclude the regular season on Friday when they play host to Watertown for senior night.

A slow start that produced a 2-0 first half deficit proved to be too much to overcome as the boys soccer team came up just short in their non-league trip to powerhouse Liverpool. George Betoubam and Abe Haley scored off passes from Jeff Meyers and A.J. Sinclair as the Warriors improved to 11-1-2 on the season. Austin Wilde answered in the second half and Josh Hudson registered six saves for the Raiders, who fell to 10-4-1 with the loss.

Even with Title IX, playing field still isn't level

By Nicole Hansen

Did you know that prior to 1970, if a woman wanted to pursue a professional degree in college, chances were she wouldn't be admitted to a law school or medical school program because she was a woman?

At that time there were quotas on the number of women allowed to enter these programs. Men and women thought this was wrong, so in 1972, Congress passed Title IX of the 1972 Education Amendments Act, a federal law that prohibits discrimination on the basis of gender at educational institutions that are recipients of federal funds. Popularly called "Title IX," this law opened the door for women to become doctors, lawyers and college athletes.

In many places all girl sports teams were not available in schools until this law was passed in 1972. Since then women have been able to compete just like the boys. Girls are also allowed to try out for a boys team, but boys cannot do the same if there are more boys playing sports at their school than girls. Since boys have more opportunities than girls, it has been determined that a boy playing on a girls' team would take away a participation opportunity for an underrepresented sex. Thus, in the interest of the "class" (all girls), boys are not allowed to take spots on a girls' team, even though the reverse is permitted.

But girls are allowed to participate in sports so they are now equal to the boys now, right? Not exactly, as that fight is far from over and female athletes are still seen as less than male athletes. Female high school athletes receive 1.3 million fewer athletic participation opportunities than their male counterparts (3.2 million female vs. 4.5 million male).

This is not just a problem in high school or college sports, but also in professional sports. For a WNBA player in the 2015 season, the minimum salary was $38,913, the maximum salary was $109,500, and the team salary cap in 2012 was $878,000. For NBA players in the 2015-2016 season, the minimum salary is $525,093, the maximum salary is $16.407 million, and the team salary cap is an all-time high of $70 million. But then again, how many people can say they've even watched an WNBA game?

Exactly.

For winning the 2015 Women's World Cup the U.S. Women's National Team won $2 million. Germany's men's team took home $35 million for winning the 2014 World Cup. The U.S. men's team finished in 11th place and collected $9 million, and each men's team that was eliminated in the first round of the 2014 World Cup received $8 million apiece, which is four times as much as the 2015 women's championship team.

Girls sports carry the same benefits for girls that they do for the boys. Sports give everyone the opportunity to do what they love. It allows aggression to be released in a positive way and it lets people be themselves while teaching teamwork and discipline. And that is why all athletes should be treated the same, regardless of their gender.
